The Honorable Bernie Sanders
332 Dirksen Senate Office Building
United States Senate
Washington D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Sanders:

We are writing to convey our support for S. 3219, “The Federal Reserve Independence Act”. Americans for Financial Reform (AFR) is a coalition of more than 250 national, state, and local groups who have come together to advocate for reform of the financial industry. Members of AFR include consumer, civil rights, investor, retiree, community, labor, faith based and business groups along with prominent independent experts.

In the wake of the multibillion dollar losses at JP Morgan many have called for Jamie Dimon, the CEO of the bank, to resign from the board of directors of the New York Federal Reserve, the major regulator of JP Morgan. We agree that Jamie Dimon should resign. But his presence on the board is also a symptom of a broader problem with conflicts of interest in the governance of the Federal Reserve system. S. 3219 would address this broader problem by ensuring that the executives of regulated banks do not serve on the boards of directors of Federal Reserve banks.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve is chosen by the President and subject to Senate confirmation. But two-thirds of the directors in each of the 12 regional banks that make up the Federal Reserve system are elected by the local banks in that region. These directors may hold stock in or invest in regulated banks. Up to one-third of the board of directors for each regional bank (so-called ‘Class A Directors’) may also be – and typically are - current employees of the regulated banks in that region.

The financial crisis and its aftermath have made clearer than ever before the central role the Federal Reserve plays in our financial system, and therefore why governance that is accountable to the public and not to the financial industry, is so important. During the crisis of 2008 and 2009 the Federal Reserve granted trillions of dollars of direct lending assistance to individual banks through special credit programs. The Fed’s role in setting interest rates through the Open Market Committee is enormously important in good times and bad – and regional directors elect the regional bank presidents on that committee. The Fed’s role in the everyday supervision and oversight of banks and bank holding companies also influences the allocation of trillions of dollars in our economy in the normal course of business. And although rulewriting is formally done by the Board of Governors, supervision can and should help inform the rule writing process, and is of course fundamental to the actual enforcement of rules and regulations.. Much of this supervision is actually performed by the regional banks, which means the boards for these regional banks are particularly positioned to impact it. This problem is most acute at the New York Federal Reserve, which supervises the largest Wall Street banks. We now know, for example, that lenient supervision by the New York Federal Reserve played a crucial role in the massive risk management failures at Citibank that helped lead directly to the financial crisis, and it looks increasingly likely that lax supervision from the Fed was part of what allowed JP Morgan to take the huge risks that are now costing billions.

Dodd Frank made some modest adjustments in Federal Reserve governance, but the broader changes in S. 3219 are needed and important. The bill mandates that the directors of regional Federal Reserve banks be appointed by the Board of Governors ( who are in turn nominated by the President and subject to Senate confirmation ) , rather than elected by the banks they supervise. It also bans directors or employees of the Federal Reserve from holding stock in the banks they supervise. These are straightforward, common-sense solutions that we endorse and believe should become law.

Sincerely,

Americans for Financial Reform
